

Communicating Applied Social Research

Spring Semester 2007

Dr. George Luke
SYA 6933-02
Wednesdays 5:30-8:30
519 Bellamy

Communicating Applied Social Research will teach the skills needed for planning, conducting and presenting research to a non-technical audience, including:

- Understanding the Applied Research Setting
- Practical Research Design
- Theorizing Social Interventions
- Presentation Techniques

Oriented to students in the social sciences and related fields who are planning to enter, or already work in a professional setting concerned with grant writing, reporting research results, evaluating programs and/or advising policy makers. Communicating Applied Social Research will teach you how to understand and talk to policy makers. No prerequisites required, but some familiarity with social science research methods is helpful.

For more information contact the instructor at gluke@fsu.edu, or Ms. Jamie Yeargan, Sociology Graduate Program Assistant, at jdyeargan@admin.fsu.edu